GETTING WEATHER READY

The Regional Community Resilience Group (RCRG) Newsletter – Keeping members weather ready

Welcome to the Autumn/Winter 2021 edition of RCRG News

COP 26 has been one of the main talking points on almost every news bulletin over these past weeks.

COP26 is another name for the 26th United Nations Climate Change conference. It took place in Glasgow from late October to early November and brought together countries and organisations working on the frontline of climate change to inspire actions that will tackle the climate change emergency now and for future generations.

The extreme heatwave of the summer seems like a distant memory but it demonstrated clearly how we are already experiencing weather extremes caused by climate change. With many organisations gearing up for COP26 it has been a busy few months but in this edition of the newsletter we want to look at how our communities are preparing for the incoming winter period. Some helpful articles with tips and advice on how to protect homes are provided and we will look at travelling safely in winter weather conditions. There are also updates on several schemes on the ground that will help mitigate against the impacts of flooding along with other key information from partners who are working together to help 'Get Weather Ready?'
