

Screening is important because early detection of disease often produces better outcomes for patients. At this stage treatment may be more effective, avoiding significant ill health and in some cases premature death.

PHA staff provide particular expertise on service evaluation and review, assessment of the health and wellbeing needs of the population, and evidence-based practice.

They also have a key role in supporting the development, implementation and evaluation of regional service frameworks.

Latest News

"If it wasn't for screening, I probably wouldn't be here today" - Cervical Cancer Prevention Week

The Public Health Agency encourages people to confirm their decision to save lives this Organ Donation Week

Urology Awareness Month: be aware of the signs and symptoms of cancers relating to the urinary and reproductive systems

Minister marks first anniversary of Dáithí's Law

Public Health Agency launches powerful photographic exhibition 'The Call' to raise awareness of paediatric organ donation

Latest publications

Bowel cancer screening: the facts \(English and translations\)

Bowel cancer screening: the next step \(English and translations\)

Reviewing your cervical screening history: information for women diagnosed with cervical cancer

Cervical screening: what you should know

Cervical screening: the colposcopy examination

Print